DETAILED ACTION

This action is issued in response to the amendment/RCE filed 5/1/08.

Claims 1-44 were canceled. Claim 45 was added.

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 5/1/08 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Regarding Claim 1, The preamble calls for "parsing unstructured and partially structured name and address data". There are no structures or encoded instructions within the claim for this functionality to be realized. Part (a) of claim 1 refers to "knowledge base analyzing", whereas there are no structures or encoded functions within claim 1 which permit this functionality to be realized instructions within the claim for this functionality to be realized.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Fujisawa et al. (U.S. Patent 6,182,062) filed 8/21/1996.

Regarding Claim 1, No patentable weight is attributed to actions of parsing or consulting an inference engine defined in the first paragraph of claim 1 since these are intended usages of the system rather than physical features of the system (MPEP 2106, Section C).

FIG. 1 illustrates the components of a knowledge base program. The knowledge base analyzes data (components 503 and 504) using at least lexicon-grammatical analysis (see lexical analysis unit 503). The techniques of orthographic, semantic and contextual predefined analysis are optionally recited (due to the phrase "one of" in part (a)) and thus carry no patentable weight. The knowledge base uses a knowledge representation language (computer programming) which embodies systematic functional linguistic theory (syntax rules in the grammar file: col. 16, lines 54-56). The knowledge base builds representations of data (output text: FIG. 27) including a form from at least one language (English). The recitation of scripts from multiple countries is an optional recitation carrying no patentable weight (see the phrase "selected from" in part (B)). The knowledge base includes a knowledge representation layer (words 501), a knowledge base management layer (lexical analysis unit 503), a language inference layer (syntactic analysis unit 504) and a language programming interface (input unit 502). The output produced from the input is the body of executable knowledge.

The knowledge base analyzes data (components 503 and 504) using at least lexicon-grammatical analysis (see lexical analysis unit 503) and thus includes a lexicon-grammatical level (text or words). The levels of orthographic, semantic and contextual predefined analysis are optionally recited (due to the phrase "one of" in part (a)) and thus carry no patentable weight.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 5/1/08 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant's amendments didn't overcome the rejections under 35 USC 112, second paragraph, for those currently specified. Applicant argues the description of parsing in claim 1 is definite and is performed by the inference engine. This argument is not correct. Claim 1 states that parsing is done by "consulting" with an inference engine, but does not indicate that the inference engine actually performs the parsing action. No part of claim 1 indicates which physical structure performs the parsing. The action of "consulting", by itself, is not considered to be the parsing. Applicant also asserts that the issue of "knowledge base analyzing" described in part (a) of claim 1 has been corrected by amendment. However, part (a) of claim 1 has not been amended, so the issue remains of record.

With respect to the rejection of claim 1 under 35 USC 102, applicant takes issue with the examiner's finding that certain features of claim 1 carry no patentable weight. Applicant traverses the examiner's citation of MPEP 2106, Section C (supporting the finding of no patentable weight) by arguing that no such section of the MPEP even exists. This argument is not correct. MPEP 2106 Section C ("Review the Claims") appears in both the paper and electronic versions of the MPEP. In the paper version (version 5), it appears on pages 2100-6 and 2100-7. The exact same text appears in the electronic version of the MPEP on the USPTO website. This section has existed in the MPEP since at least August 2006, although the principle of questioning patentable weight of claim terminology has been recited in the MPEP for since at least the late 1980's.
